A stimulating review of the management of change in Maritime Safety and Awareness.

"Eight Down" reviews 8 maritime casualties over a period of 42 years, beginning with the loss of the Edmund Fitzgerald on Lake Superior in 1975 to the Stella Daisy in 2017.

As a former seafarer and member of the maritime profession for 50 years, all of the "Eight" have taken place during the Author's watch and have found resonance with his own experiences that sparked his curiosity. He explores connective threads that illustrate how these events are the consequence of what Professor James Reason has called the "Swiss Cheese Model".

Learn from the Author's personal experiences having been only one step away from becoming a maritime casualty – was it pure luck? Or was it awareness and raised consciousness of someone who acted before the last step occurred?

This fascinating book provides insight into the management of change as it relates to safety and the avoidance of travelling the final hole in the "Swiss Cheese"
